Foster a team that feels understood, engaged and committed to your vision

Are your observations and communication with all your school staff giving you an accurate understanding of how they feel? What information would help you better support staff well-being, development and sense of community?

There are many different factors that influence staff's attitudes and experiences related to their job, and work/life balance. Capturing accurate data from all stakeholder perspectives will help you provide specific professional, emotional and practical supports that target investments in programs that are most beneficial for your staff.

Understanding and acting on collective voice can increase engagement, reduce absence from work, improve safety in the workplace and enhance job satisfaction. It means staff are better able to support their teams, their school and their students.
